Provides Training Analysis and Supervision

Dr. Guerra is a licensed psychologist and certified psychoanalyst in Bala Cynwyd, Pennsylvania. She has been in private practice for over thirty years, conducting individual, group, and couples psychotherapy with adults in the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania area. In addition, Dr. Guerra is a qualified training analyst and supervisor who has taught numerous workshops on topics such as clinical writing, the psychological treatment of breast cancer survivors, improving communication in the workplace and coping with major loss.

Dr. Guerra is a past President of the Philadelphia Society of Psychoanalytic Psychology and a past board member of the Philadelphia Center for Psychoanalytic Education. In 1987 she co-founded The Loss Center of Philadelphia, a therapeutic program designed to assist those who had experienced significant losses.

Dr. Guerra is a graduate and current member of The International Psychotherapy Institute and is affiliated with numerous other professional organizations such as the Society for Psychoanalysis and Psychoanalytic Psychology of the American Psychological Association, the National Association for the Advancement of Psychoanalysis and The Pennsylvania Psychological Association. She is also an alumna of New Directions, a program focused on writing and critical thinking from a psychoanalytic perspective that is part of the Washington Center for Psychoanalysis.

In addition to her clinical work, Dr. Guerra is the author of many papers and articles including "Why Do They Hate Us?" published on Medium.com as well as in PSPP Currents (Philadelphia Society of Psychoanalytic Psychology newsletter) and "Strange Love", published in The New Directions Journal of the Washington Center for Psychoanalysis. She also wrote The Impact of Parental Alcoholism on Ego Development and Affective Disorders to meet the requirements for her doctoral dissertation.
