After control analyses with Hyman Spotnitz and Marie Coleman Nelson and graduation in 1978 in the Center for Modern Psychoanalytic Studies's second class, Dr. Friedman taught for many years at four psychoanalytic institutes. Dr. Friedman has published articles in several journals including two papers in "Modern Psychoanalysis," many book reviews, and chapters in three books. After spending over half a century learning to be an analyst, Dr. Friedman enjoys giving back to the profession through supervision of candidates. He continues in the private practice of psychoanalysis in New York City, although most of his work is now done remotely.
